

Atlantic Coast High School

12.11.2017 & 12.12.2017

Community Relations brought our financial literacy workshop to Atlantic Coast High School this month for the first time. We partnered with Mrs. Dickson's Senior Economics classes. All totaled, we completed five presentations over two days for 121 students.

This was our first time partnering with an economics class at a high school, but it turned out to be a great fit. Mrs. Dickson was just completing the students' financial literacy unit. They all have projects due this week about budgeting, so our workshop was an excellent complement to the curriculum that the students were already working through.

Community Relations was joined by FFCU's new Regional Branch Director, Randy Turpin. We were excited to have the opportunity to show Randy our financial literacy program and our passion for educating youth!

Everyone really enjoyed the activity. Students were shocked as always at how fast their paychecks can disappear, but each left having learned some important lessons that will hopefully carry them into the future as they graduate this spring and enter college and the workforce.
